COMMENTARY

The key event in January for Brits was the UK departure from the EU on the 31st of January．The bigger global event affecting financial markets is the Wuhan or Coronavirus which originated in the aforementioned Chinese province．The Coronavirus turned January into a month of two halves．January started with most financial markets delivering solid returns after the strong finish for risk assets in the final weeks of 2019. I said halves but market trajectories altered after the Coronavirus emanated from Wuhan，a Chinese city the size of London and capital of Hubei province，hit the newswires on January 22nd．The subsequent spread and deaths，albeit small in number and of people vulnerable due to existing ill－health，has been sufficient to effect economic growth forecasts in China and elsewhere．As China is the second largest global economy，global growth will also be dented．This will likely keep a lid on interest rates in most markets，which should support markets．

Given the more muted outlook for global economic activity，low－risk assets such as government bonds have performed well．However， their yields have moved lower from unattractive to extremely so and as we have noted before，when seeking to achieve a UK inflation plus 3\％outcome，holding an asset like ten－year maturity UK government bonds（gilts）yielding $0.6 \%$ ，makes little sense．

The T．Bailey Dynamic A Inc Fund returned－0．61\％during the month of January．
＊Includes net exposure of forward foreign exchange contracts．
