COMMENTARY

Long dated bond markets were particularly unsettled in September with UK gilt yields reaching 27-year highs after the Treasury's record £14 billion syndicated issuance was met with caution. US Treasuries also came under pressure facing fiscal largesse and amid escalating tensions between the Trump administration and the US Federal Reserve. In Europe, France's refusal to implement €44 billion of planned spending cuts led to the removal of its prime minister and a subsequent credit downgrade by Fitch, reinforcing the theme of fiscal fragility across Western markets.

In this environment, safe-haven demand drove gold above US$3,800 per ounce, providing valuable diversification benefits to the Fund. At the same time, Asia ex-Japan equities contributed positively, supported by renewed Chinese policy efforts to bolster consumption and stabilise financial markets. Taiwanese semiconductor names also performed strongly, benefiting from ongoing global enthusiasm for artificial intelligence and digital infrastructure investment but starting from more respectable valuations.

The artificial intelligence theme continued to dominate global markets, with Nvidia's US$100 billion commitment to OpenAI underscoring both the scale and risk of vendor-financed expansion. We view current market exuberance with caution and trimmed the Fund's exposure to the Polar Capital Artificial Intelligence Fund.

A notable contributor was Chrysalis Investments, which advanced following Klarna's high-profile New York IPO. The deal improved visibility on asset values and provided additional liquidity, further enhancing Chrysalis's portfolio.

Overall, the Fund posted a solid gain for the month, driven by gold, Asian equities and selective technology holdings, offsetting weakness in UK assets. As we enter the final quarter of the year, we remain focused on diversification, liquidity and risk management - maintaining a disciplined stance as markets contend with diverging central bank policies, fiscal uncertainty and concentrated equity leadership.
